| Comment(s) or question(s) | In regards to the temporary prohibition of using credit ratings for insurance premiums, I was completely blind sided when I received my insurance premiums and saw that they increased over $750. If the main argument in putting this into effect using emergency powers, how is this helping anyone if their premiums are increasing at 25% or more than they paid the prior year. While I understand that the pandemic has impacted people differently, people should not be penalized because they are responsible by having to pay more. The insurance companies are disproportionately charging higher premiums to those with higher credit scores to offset the cost of those with lower scores or the number of people who decide to no longer pay for insurance. Please reconsider placing the prohibition on credit ratings. |
